THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION

1. As of mid-June 1952, the Central and South China Military and Administrative Committee and the Central and South China Military Area Command had issued joint orders to the Kwangsi government and the Kwangsi Military District; these orders stipulated that Kwangsi should adopt the "Administration by Regions and Key Points" (0433/0575/6850/7820/2457/2398) plan.
2. This plan, now being adopted in Kwangsi on a trial basis, requires the following adjustments in the administrative structure of the province:
 - a. Nanning is to be the center for military and administrative organization. All first-level (sic) organizations of Kwangsi plus subordinate units of the Central Government, the Central and South China Military Area, and Central Government training organizations located in Kwangsi, will maintain their offices in Nanning.
 - b. Liuchou is to be the center for industrial and industrial construction organizations in Kwangsi, including all supervisory and planning organizations for industrial construction as well as supervisory organizations for factories operated by the Central and South China Military Area. Light industry will be centered in Laipin (109-16, 23-42), and the handicraft industry in Pinyang (108-44, 23-18).
 - c. Kueilin will be the administrative center for military training that is the responsibility of the Kwangsi government or the Kwangsi Military District; this includes training of cadre personnel for local administration, special administration, the armed forces, and for troop units of the military district. It does not include the training of military, administrative, and economic personnel, which is supervised directly by Central Government organizations.
